Wine Advocate, William Kelly (90pts): Aromas of ripe cherries, raspberries and dark chocolate introduce the 2017 Irancy, a medium to full-bodied, fleshy and muscular wine, framed by powdery tannins. Produced entirely from free-run juice, it's a dramatic, more modern rendition of Irancy that will offer a broad drinking window.

Wine Spectator, William Kelly (90+pts): Offering up inviting aromas of dark berries, cherries and Indian spices, the 2018 Irancy Les Beaux Monts is full-bodied, rich and muscular, with tangy acids and ample reserves of ne but youthfully chewy tannins. Brooding and broad shouldered, this is a hearty, characterful Irancy that will reward some bottle age, though its structure isn't for the fainthearted.

Wine Advocate, William Kelly (91+pts): The 2018 Irancy Les Bâtardes has also turned out very nicely, offering up an inviting bouquet of cherries, raspberries and plums, followed by a medium to full-bodied, rich and fleshy palate that's muscular and structured but ripely tannic, with none of the asperity that one might expect from a powerful Irancy.
